PRINCETON CLUB THEATER EVENT AND BRUNCH ON SUNDAY, APRIL 24, 2016

WHAT: Sunday brunch followed by Milwaukee Chamber Theater's production of Noel Coward's "Fallen Angels" described by the MCT as:

"Julia and Jane are the dearest of friends. And both are happily married. That is until they each unexpectedly hear that an old flame will be paying a call. When they discover that they're both still carrying a torch for the very same Maurice, the fur begins to fly.

Noel Coward is the master of drawing room comedy, and this delightful diversion is chock-full of his razor-sharp wit, charming musical interludes and all-around joie de vivre."

WHEN & WHERE: Sunday, April 24, 2016. Brunch at Coquette Café at 316 N. Milwaukee Street beginning at 12:00 noon, and play beginning at 2:00 p.m. at the Cabot Theatre, 158 N. Broadway, both in the Third Ward. Free parking is available in the lot directly behind Coquette Café, and Coquette says parked cars may be left there until anytime Sunday afternoon or evening. The walk between Coquette Café and the Cabot Theater is a bit over 3 blocks. When we know how many Princeton grads and their spouses, friends and significant others will be attending the brunch, Coquette will arrange a table or tables so that we can all eat together as a group prior to the show.

HOW: Purchase your tickets directly from Milwaukee Chamber Theater either online at www.milwaukeechambertheatre.com or at the box office or by phone at 414-291-7800. Then email Steve Duback '66 at srduback@yahoo.com to say whether you will be attending the brunch and how many of you will be eating, so that Steve can make the appropriate dining arrangements for our group.

The demand for tickets is already quite strong - so buy your tickets ASAP.
